It may have started as something small, but with the right team and the right environment, helping people became something more—something better, meaningful, rewarding, and full of hope. But when you don’t call the shots, you can lose out on more than you think.

Instead of helping your clients, you’re stuck solving someone else’s problems, meeting roadblock after roadblock, until you don’t even want to go into the office.

After all, didn’t you get into this business to help others and make a difference? To be an entrepreneur?

Now it’s time to finally do that.
